One of the most reliably respected characters of Chinese fiction is the Long Dynasty diarist and diarist scholar Chin Shih, who described his wife and their children in order to advance his career after the death of the emperor's daughter. Eventually, this led to his becoming a political ally of the famous royal official Bai Zhongyu. Now, the account of Bo Xilai's former wife, Li Danyu, is likely to be a modern-day version of exposing her former husband. In 1980, Bo Xilai was a worker at the Beijing Second Light Industry Bureau. His marriage to Li was single, which was a concern for his father, who was the mayor of Dalian, a doctor at the PLA General Hospital. Li's father, Li Xueling, was a former Beijing Party secretary, and was also an uncle to Chen Geng, who has been linked to the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences. In 1990, Bo Xilai became a political ally of Jiang Zemin, and Li Xueling became a political ally of Li. In 2007, Li Xueling was appointed to the top CCP ruling committee. According to reports online, the military, have pledged their loyalty to Hu.

Jiang Zemin hasn't been heard from in several months and is likely to be in a vegetative state.
