‘Do you think it matters if companies or countries control the supply of oil?’

SÃO PAULO, BRAZIL.

RENATO MÜLLER, 29, GAS STATION ATTENDANT

It seems like this is made based on who controls the oil. And that kind of gets into situations that otherwise wouldn’t would be too — in the war of oil, the oil companies have included me. I am not of good stuff. It doesn’t matter who controls it, the countries or corporations, we are controlled by them and I don’t want anything like that.

It seems like that goes up in one and they all go up at the same time so there is no competition.

KHAN SAID, 24, VOYAGE SUPERVISOR

Let’s say Dubai or the UAE. They have oil, yes, so they have the right to control the oil in the companies that are working in the field. Dubai has a very rich oil like Abu Dhabi. As long as they are good, the countries will prosper. They have oil and they use it very.

SUNSHINE COAST, AUSTRALIA

JOHN VATER, 54, RETIRED FINANCIAL ADVISER

The problem with some countries they can manipulate the price of oil. If you can move some countries together you have more power. This happens with companies in Australia for argument’s sake, the petrol [gasoline] companies seem to be working in synchrony. [Prices] are up in one and they all go up at the same time so there is no competition.

SEBASTIAN NILDING, 35, PRIVATE SECURITY SURVEILLANCE

[In my view] if OPEC [Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries] is the most appropriate organization to control the oil supply, or maybe it’s necessary to find another route to this so we can have economic lives. I think a better solution would be to get an agreement and establish an international oil trade tax.

I think that it is good the way it is today. There is a kind of economic idea of the all stupidly or maybe it’s necessary to find another route to this so we can have economic lives. I think a better solution would be to get an agreement and establish an international oil trade tax.

DINO SOTO, CONSTRUCTION COMPANY OWNER

There are some companies that want to jump in and get crazy prices. I think it’s good. It’s good the way it is today. I think the government should take control of that, that they take control of the alcohol and similar things so that companies don’t get rich from the people’s money.

Violence in

Burmah’s Rakhine State Displaces 90,000

By JAY JENKINS

More than 90,000 people have been displaced in the recent sectarian violence in Burma’s southwestern Rakhine State, the country’s military said Tuesday in an apparent bid to deflect attention from other problems. The WFP said it had reached more than 300,000 people with emergency food aid during the past month, including distributing rice, beans, and cooking oil. The agency said it was reaching most of the displaced population.

Violence between ethnic Rakhine Buddhists and Rohingya Muslims essentially started on June 1 after a Buddhist woman was killed. The incident, which was blamed on Muslims in the city of Sittwe, quickly spread and many homes were burned to the ground, according to estimates. The government of Burma (also known as Myanmar) declared a state of emergency on June 11 but the violence has continued unabated.

The destruction of property appears to be widespread. Myanmar authorities indicate that as many as 6,000 homes may have been destroyed in Sittwe, capital of Myanmar’s western state of Rakhine on June 11.

New Democracy Coalition Deal Is Close

By JONAS FRANSSON, 37, POST-GRADUATE STUDENT

It is encouraging by what we’ve heard from the European leaders today and by this broad focus around the world. We’re seeing to the need to strengthen economic growth,” he said. Mubarak described the meaning of European leaders next week as “a critical summit for Europe,” he said.
